He was killed in action on 24th August 1917 during the Battle of Passchendaele for which he was awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal. A comrade said he saw him fall, badly wounded. His remains were never identified for burial and so he is commemorated on the Tyne Cot Memorial, West-Vlaanderen, Belgium. In addition to the Distinguished Conduct Medal, John was awarded the 1914-15 Star, the British War Medal and the Victory Medal.

The following citation for the award of the Distinguished Conduct Medal appeared in the London Gazette on 26th January 1918: "For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when the enemy counter-attacked using flammenwerfers. He went out in front of the trench with his Lewis gun, on his own initiative, killing the flammenwerfer-bearers and materially assisting to beat off the attack. Again on the same day, though he had been wounded during the enemy's counter-attack he pushed forward and kept up a steady and accurate fire on the enemy machine guns and enabled our counter-attack to push forward. He accomplished this despite his leg being broken, showing magnificent courage and devotion to duty".

John is also commemorated on the Dewsbury Cenotaph in Crow Nest Park and in the Dewsbury Roll of Honour kept in Dewsbury Central Library and on the Memorial Plaque to former employees of Messrs Crawshaw and Warburton displayed in the porch of St. Paul's Church, Hanging Heaton.
